Dear FEPS community,

I wanted to talk a little this week about traditions. Family traditions aren't just about birthdays or holiday celebrations - they're about creating memories, building belonging, and strengthening the bonds that hold your family together. This can also include agreements that you make as a family and work towards. This week, it's worth shining a light on how the little (and big) traditions you create can have a huge impact on your child's sense of security and connection. One of our newest traditions here at FEPS is our Mothers Day coffee morning, where we celebrate and thank our mothers and the important women in our student's lives. Please join us from 8am Thursday morning for a coffee and pastry as we continue this lovely tradition.

Family traditions give kids a sense of identity, comfort, and belonging. Whether it's Friday night pizza, a Saturday morning park walk, or a special way you celebrate birthdays - these rituals build strong family foundations that kids carry with them into adulthood.

Try this: Think about a simple tradition you can introduce or bring back this week - something your child can look forward to and feel part of.

Looking forward to continuing to build strong foundations with our school community this Thursday morning, and beyond.

Dad joke of the week: What did the blades of grass say to the tree at the start of Autumn?
"Please don't leaf us again!"

Kind Regards,

Warren Bull

Principal
